Dear Mr Matic

CIV 1106 of 2022

I have been provided with a copy of an email dated 7 September 2022 addressed to Justice Solomon's associate, 'in her personal capacity'.

In addition to sending this correspondence to the official email address for Justice Solomon's associate and the other party's solicitors in this matter, you also sent it to the associate's personal email address.

The efficient discharge of the Court's business is aided by allowing email communication directly from parties (or if they are represented, their legal representatives) to Court staff. However, if I become aware that any member of the staff of the Court is subjected to intemperate or threatening email correspondence, they are instructed not to engage in further email communication with the sender, whether that person is a litigant or a legal practitioner.

That is what I have done in your case.

I regard your email correspondence of 7 September 2022 as intemperate and threatening. The fact that you have communicated to a member of staff on her private email address, and copied it to other persons, is intolerable.

I have instructed all of the relevant Court staff that they are not to communicate with you by either telephone or email. If email correspondence is sent to the Court, staff have been instructed that it should be ignored.

The litigation to which you are a party will continue to be conducted in the usual manner. Should there be any issue you wish to raise in the course of the litigation, that must be done by filing an appropriate, formal application.

I will not engage with you further in relation to this letter.

Yours sincerely

The Hon Justice Peter Quinlan
Chief Justice of Western Australia
